ST. Louis, Monday, October 22. The most terrific rain storm that ever visited this section of the country swept over this city at haif past four o'clock yesterday afternoon, and doing an immense amount of damage.

It come from the south and bearing a little eastward and seemed to twist like a screw. It lasted from ten to fifteen minutes and was about a quarter of a mile wide when it first struck but grew narrower as it proceeded north. Scores of buildings were unroofed and hundreds more or less damaged; trees and fences uprooted. In every direction shutters sign boards, timber and all loose things were carried through the air almost like feathers. RAILROAD SWINDLE EXCITEMENT. Considerable agitation was caused in financial and political circles to-day by the announcement that Mr. James Parton, the well known author, had published a treatise on the relations of railroad corporations to party politics. The pamphlet made its appearance this afternoon. It sets forth, in considerable detail, the workings of several roads; chiefly, however, the organization and management of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company and its dependencies. It is alleged that within three-years the chief officers have issued new capital without a corresponding increase of assets, amounting to over $19,000,000; also, that about $3,000,000 have been divided among the directors by this transaction, and

RESCUE OF MEN AT SEA.

Acting Master Hally, commanding the United States steamer Newbern, reports to the Department from Key West, on the 4th, when in latitude 29 38 north, longitude 80 west, he discovered a large pile of floating timber, and Vigilance discovered a raft containing five men. They proved to be the captain, second mate, cook, and two seamen of the British bark Ambrozine, which foundered in a gale October I. They were from Pensacola, Florida, bound to Queenstown, and when picked up were without food and clothing, and nearly exhausted. The raft was small, sea heavy, and it was with the greatest difficulty they were enabled to hold on until rescued. These men were the remainder of a crew of fifteen, ten of whom perished.

But by the disease is ever and Ague. But by the see attacks are few and far between, as the Bittors cleanse the blood and purify the stomach, so that the disease is forced to leave the system, and can not return again very soon, as it keeps the system in a warm and heated state. Diarrhea, and Dysentery, or Flux.

In these troublesome and painful diseases these Bitters will effect a speedy cure, and have done so in every place where they have been offered for sale. No family should be without these Bitters, and will not if you find out the virtue which is in them. Money refunded if the Bitters does not do good. We will wager $10, on a like sum, that these Bitters will effect a more speedy relief or cure than anyother Bitters, or patent compounds, and are willing to take two cases of the same kind and try it on. The "General's" superiority peri lies in his "earnestness." Poor Koontz was certainly a Union man, after a fashion, but was not "earnest." His patriotism was of the jocular sort. He was not in earnest" when he fell in behind the rolling drum, and shrill fife, carrying a forty pound ack "to the music of the Union." His career as a soldier, diversified as it was with seasons of freezing, sweltering, evaporating, starving, and almost dying of forced marches and fatigue, was but a pleasant jest, culminating in an uproarious, side splitting, stupendous joke at Resaca. KOONTZ doubtless enjoyed the joke heartily, and fortunately has constantly with him an agreeable reminder of the fun he had while playing Union man. Every time he looks at his empty sleeve he explodes in roars of laughter, thinking of the successful hoaz he played upon the country, in pretending to be a patriot. But, withal, he must realize that, in a pecuniary sense, it would have been better to have staid at home, and been "an earnest Union man,"-like "General" ELLIOTT. The people relish a far. While willing to encourage hilarity, to a reasonable extent, "carnestness" only is to be paid for. That "General" ELLIOTT was earnest" man, no one will dispute. The Journal 1s working itself, by easy stages, up to the point of an open and undis-guised advocacy of negro suffrage. It has althat the franchise would be found a sovereign balm for all the ills that African flesh is heir to in the Southern States, but, like a craven, refuses to meet the issue here at home. The Journal advocates negro suffrage over the Carolina-a dodge quite as transparent as the "Mrs. HARRIS" of "SAIRY GAMP." After a pathetic recital of the enormities perpetrated ern States, the Journal says:

These grievances demand a remedy, and hu-manity and justice require that a remedy shall be found. Congress provided for the protec-tion of the blacks of the South by passing the tion of the blacks of the South by passing the civil rights and freedmen's bureau bills, but under the inspiration of Andrew Johnson the former is ignored by Southern courts, and the latter is so inefficiently executed as to be almost useless.

Hon. D. C. BRANHAM, "the tribune of the people," a member of the House of Representitives from Jefferson county, is a lucky dog. He therefore sets himself up in opposition to Elder NEWCOMB, who is just now pipe laying for the speakership. As capacity for office is never a question with our opponents, we predict NEWCOMB will be beaten on the ground that the fruits should be distributed and not "hogged" by the State House lazaroni, and that while a large preponderance of the corruption and political knavery of the party is done in Indianapolis, yet the rural districts will not see their rights ignored in all cases. The question as to who shall enjoy the "fruits" promises to be as interesting as has been the fight to secure them, and already things are getting into puglistic trim. With BRANIAM as Spoaker and MaCAU-LEY as State printer, the court organ and its edilitor would be ruled out of the ring.

More Amendments.

Since amendments to the Constitution of the United States have come in fashion, one or two have suggested themselves to us. In the first place let that instrument be so amended as to apportion direct taxation according to wealth instead of population. By a long course of systematic robbery New England, which is deficient in population, has managed to accumulate immense wealth within her borders. Let the Constitution be so amended as to put New England, which is deficient in population, has managed to accumulate immense wealth within her borders. Let the Constitution be so amended as to put New England on the same footing as the semi-birbarous States of the West and South, and then, instead of collecting revenue by imposts, levy a direct tax on the wealth of the constitution provides that each State, no matter how small or how thinly populated, shall be entitled to equal representation in the Senate as Minnesota, with the 25,81 square miles. But if he was stripped stark naked, without a cent in the world, or a mouthful to est, he would be a very CRESUS in comparison with KOONTZ, in the fact that he still preserves all his arms, all of his legs, his eyes, ribs and in-testines. Being an "earnest" Union man, he staid at home and saved his limbs, while his opponent, lacking earnestness as a Union man, foolishly went to war, and had an arm shot away. All the gold and fat offices in the world would not pay young Koontz for the arm he left at Resaca.

In April, 1861, just as our men were rushing down to Washington to defend the Capital, two men accidentally met in the streets of New York. They were Dr. Bellows and Dr. Elisha Harris, both men of large culture, and who, through different courses of reading, had had their minds directed to the terrible waste of life experienced in the Crimea—Dr. Bellows as a member of the Society for the Cultivation of Social Science, and Dr. Harris, from his experience as a physician in the great quarantine hospital. RIENTY OF SARDINES.—The French sardine fishery has been more successful this season than for the last ten years. At Ducarnenz and Ghncarneau, the principal centers of this species of industry, eight hundred and eighty-four boats caught upwards of one hundred and ten millions of sardines in the mouth of July alone, the sale producing 707,548 francs. At the end of the month one thousand sardines could be bought for two francs only.

A new dodge was lately attempted on a countryman in Philadelphia. He was asked to give two "fives" for a ten, which he did, rolling up the ten with the rest of his meney and putting it in his pocket. He afterwards discovered that a fine black slik thread was fastened to the ten and hung out of his pocket, by the means of which they expected to pull out the whole of his bills, but it didn't work. It is said of Mr. Sumner's approaching marriage that it is no secret that the match is strongly opposed by the lady's friends, whose aristor-rait prejudices will not be satisfied, even with a Senator and statesman of power and fame, if his fortune be only moderate and his descent not from the New England Brahmins. The fact that the bride relinquiches the interest on a fortune by giving away her hand, adds the spice of heroism to the event.

The advance in gold and the decline in five twenties abroad is the more extraordinary, for the reason that the revenue of the Government is large, and collected without producing any distress and scarcily any complaint, and that, while our public expenditures are being diminished, the national debt is in very satisfactory process of liquidation. Our revenue has greatly exceeded the estimates, and the expenditures have fallen short of the amount estimated. The revenue for the past year from the customs was estimated at a hundred and forty-seven millions, and the actual amount was a hundred and seventy-nine millions. The internal revenue was expected to produce two flundred and seventy-one millions, and the amount actually collected was three hundred and nine millions.

Further up the Champs Elysee you come to the Round Point, fleeked with great clusters of pearls, which glimmer upon beds of abundant flowers, sown on the borders of fountain basins. Wide, white, like a dream of popples in the night, you see the far great Arch of the Star, the shadowy groves of the Palais d'Elysee, whence this ruling piak of astuteness received his bloody flanked couriers after the murder of the people; the Champs Elysee ceases; to your left a great whirlpool of fireworks blazes blue and crimson in the trees; you hear the shudder of music, itself tempted by its own voluptuousness, and see the common people gazing in at the gate, where glittering attires slip through perpetually—two and two, two and two, the everlasting twins of guilt—it is the Bai Mabille, the brightest window in Pandemonium!

At the entrance afar, mile on mile perspective, straight through far illumined poplars, like the great alsie of Carlsruhe, makes you stop to smite your forchead. Is it real?

"Bah!" says the Viscount, "it is only a screen of scenery closing and prolonging the end of the walk."

screen of scenery closing and prolonging the end of the walk."

Turning in, through bowered walks, intricate like the sin they lead to, all chequered amidst the branches of the rose trees, with purple, orange, silver firs, you hear at intervals the splash of water, shot whence you know not against burnished mirrors planted in the mosses, far up, wherein every diamond drop become a brooch, a mine, a constellation, infinite in repetition. There are caverns faintly luminous with stalactites, over whose jagged edges the pure rivulets fall upon the scales of gold fish, swimming in the phosphorescent pools, or fung by playful cascades into darker vases. From this enchanted labyrinth you pass to open plazas, where the grass is lighted with a multitude of low, soft tapers, like glow worms pattering in fields of amber. Beyond thus firegarden, set against backlike glow worms pasturing in fields of amber. Beyond this firegarden, set against background and environs of kiosks, cupolas, pagodas, arbors, green copses, and everywhere to lengthen the distances with magical deceit, the painted boundary walls slow far enchanted prospectives—the orchestral temple rises like a great banyan tree, under whose twisted trunks the hundred musicians sit, and under the heavy tropical canopies the dancers and the Indian birds.

All this, comprising so much, is yet an enclosure of not more than six or eight New York building lots, but its effect upon every visitor is simply thrilling. It reminds one, both in art and occupants, of Satan's council chamber:

thunders like the battle call of flot and revolt against all good restraints, and you seem to see start to it, among the lights and foliage, the leering faces of devils, for those orgies it is worthy. Carried away in this Midgards, this Aladdin's cavern, you, who do not know, following the dancers in the Cancan, believe them to be veritable pleasure seekers, immedestly impelled by the influences of the night. The men, pale faced, shining eyed, leap into the air and follow the music with body as well as feet. The women are shameless, but this seems to be spontaneous, provoked by passion and music. "But," says the Viscomte, "they are hired, every one of them, men and women; all this is art, not licentiousness. This is not Parls, but a show devised for foreigners."

"It is very much of a Parlsian show, however," adds your friend.

Directly you see a very old, gray haired man.

"Traine leave Indianapolis the content of the provided man."

"The provided man to the content of the mind the provided man."

Evansyille and Crawfords:

Three Traine leave Indianapolis deally.

"It is very much of a Parisian show, however," adds your friend.
Directly you see a very old, gray haired man seventy years gone past him, perhaps, who has the grave air of a good liver, and looks to be some declining country gentleman come back to visit the haunts of his youth. You are amused, therefore, to see him suddenly put up his cane, draw up his trowsers over his cloth gatters, and challenge one of the girls to a quadrille. Immediately with the chords of the music, his eyes infame and shoot aimost delicious fire, his hands express the utter abandonment of the damee, all grimaces of reviving passions come and go upon his shriveled features, and his rheumatic feet slip along glibly. It is a terrible spectacle, this awakening of youth in old age, and this man outdoes the coarsest, most shameful dancers of the night.
"Come," say you, "this is revolting, Why of the coarsest, most shameful dancers of the night.
"Come," say you, "this is revolting, Why of the coarsest, most shameful dancers of the night.
"Come," say you, "this is revolting, Why of the night.

"Come," say you, "this is revolting. Why don't somebody remind him of his years, and his abuse of them?"

"Because," answers the Viscomtc, "it is only old Chicquard, the inventor of the cancan, and he, also, is paid to dance."

Happily, if you look with your practical eye, you can see that it is all a huge swindle. There are games in the bowers, with pretty women for "stool pigeons," playing desperately, as if bent upon winning. If you speak to any siren, straightway the boquet merchants pounce upon you, and the waiters are very jail birds.

From the Lexington Gazette, 18th.

Disease Among Horses.

Mr. Patrick, who lives seven miles northwest of this city, informs us that a disease has broke out among his horses which has carried off five within the past ten days. He says the symptom of the disease is a slight loss of appetite and a gaunt appearance. In six or ten hours thereafter the animal appears languid and becomes stif, the fore legs are placed out and forward in moving, as is done by the chest when foundered. After the Ispse of another six or ten hours a spasmodle contraction of the muscles of the left shoulder and behind the shoulder, opposite the region of the Tung, is observable. Within eight or ten hours at the name of the muscles of the lingering a day or two, dies. Mr. P. bled copiously one horse atter he was taken down. The bleeding gave temporary relief, but death jensued in two days thereafter. One horse he bled several times in the second or third stage of the disease. It seemed to prolong his life, but he is down, and the probabilities are he will die. The horses affected never entirely lose appetite. The breathing does not seem to the much affected in the incipient stages of the disease, but afterward it becomes difficult, and grows worse until they cease to breathe at all. The body of the animal also shrinks very much before death. They never cough or run at the nose.

One animal, a mare three years old, was opened by Dr. Wardroper, Mr. P., and others. The intestines were all healthy except the lungs. The right lung was principally involved, and was filled with coagulated blood; the left lung was

Mr. P. represents that the horses affected were all work horses, and used and treated as he has been accustomed to use farm horses. He knows of no cause that could have led to the disease unless it was the unclean condition of the stable—which had not been cleaned for six or eight months, and was, consequently, very impure. The stable was plank, with no ventilation flues except over the deors, but the horses were not kept in the stable only so long as it was necessary for them to eat. It is probable that this is the beginning of a wide spread and fatal disease among horses, which, if guarded against, can be almost averted; or, if the result of local causes, those causes exist on the premises of very many farmers in this region, and should be at once removed. Cleanliness is essential to health with horses no less than with men.

RATTY.—It is alleged that the rats, since the elections went against "My Poircy" so severely, have universally resolved to migrate to the South. They are said to be going, "three hundred thousand strong," in regular army style. At New Castine, Darks county, last week, the advance guard of this army too by quarters for the might in a man's stable. In the morning the owner found his burn floor about two feet deep in solid rats. Calling in the morning the owner found his burn floor about two feet deep in solid rats. Calling in the neighbors, with their dogs, a work of slaughter was commenced, and kept up until one thousand five hundred and five rate were laid low. The story is pretty big, but like such stories is well attented by a c und of wice.

The content of the co and paid for, without his consent, leave or license, after repeated efforts on his part and by his agents to have her vacate his premises. And farther, when the hen had hatched his eggs, she ran away with his chickens, eleven in number, two eggs not producing chickens. To her services he brought an offset, he use of stable and board bill, in the shape of oatable charged her with the two eggs she spoiled, and demanded judgment for the balance the flock, nine in number, at fifty cents each. And besides, he proved that the chickens did not belong to that hen, as she was black, while the chickens were red or speckled. Hendricks has sued all his neighbors for some little trifling matter, half a dozen times each during the past two years. After a patient hearing, the Judge decided that there was no cape of action, and that the defendant was entitled to the other nine chickens, and the plaintiff must pay the costs of the sult, amounting to seven-

The Rice Crep.

The rice crop, I am glad to say, promises well. Our rice planters are in good spirits, and seem content with their experiment so far. But it is to be seen how the negroes will do this winter in ditching. A darkey dreade cold water, and will with difficulty be persuaded to go into a wet ditch to labor, especially when no longer enjoying the provision of dry clothes, good diet and comfortable cabin that awaited him when his 'taki' was over, and he had the remainder of the day to hims self. Many of the planters are introducing your reaping machines and other mechanical contrivances to meet the scarcity of labor; and it will be much relieved. It seems to me that an effective machine for ditching can be readily constructed. A good one will, without doubt, repay handsomely the inventor. Here is another good opening for Northern capital-rice planting—that pays generally well and surely, much more certainly than cotton, and with less labor.—Savannah Correspondent, New York Times.

The Late Elections.

The Late Elections.

When an anlysis is made of the elections it will be seen that despite the radical exultation over what they are pleased to term their great majorities, that they have really but a small per cent. the advantage on the aggregate vote. In Ohio, out of 500,000 votes, they have 40,000 majority. This is but a difference of eight per cent. In other words, for every fifty-four of their men who went to the polls, the defeated party polled forty-six. In Pennsylvania, on 600,000 votes, their majority is but 15,000, or less than three per cent. of the whole number. In Indians the majority is limited to the congressional Districts, this great minority is almost suppressed, yet it really exists, and is ready for practical action in the future. The two parties in the great Central States are almost equally balanced.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Dr. Channing had a brother, a physician, and at one time they both dwelt in Boston. A countryman, in search of the divine, knocked at the door of the dector, who answered it himself. After sundry questions and answers, tending to puzzle both parties, the countryman said: "You are he that preaches, ain't you?" "Ch! I see your mistake now!" replied Dr. Channing. "Its my brother who preaches; I am the doctor who practises."

rom the Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Batist Church, Pemberton, N. J., formerly of thorth Baptist Church Philadelphia, at prese Pastor of the Baptist, Church, Chester, Pa. I have known Hoofand's German Bitters favorably for a number of years. I have need them in move family, and have been so pleased with their facts, that I was induced to recommend them to many others, and know that they have operated in a strikingly beneficial manner. I take great pleasure in thus publicly proclaiming this fact, and calling the attention of those afflicted with the diseases for which they are recommended, to the diseases for which they are recommended, to these Bitters, knowing from experience that my recommendation will be sustained. I do this more cheerfully as Hoofand's Bitters is intended to benefit the afflicted, and is "not a rum drink."

Sitting in our office on Sunday night we thought that the tornado which passed over our city at nine o'clock was but a small affair, nor did we begin to appreciate its force until money. The thief was arrested in the street when returning home, about weive, we found the sidewalk which we were traversing.

Yesterday morning we made a voyage of discovery and ascertained the following damage to have been done. Commencing at the west, we found that the root of Geisendorff officering mill had been torn off, the westgable fouring mill had been torn off, the westgable chase, in the course of which he was shot at. In the meantime a citizen found the money, we found that the root of Geisendorff of the building (of brick) blown in, and the botting apparatus and machinery considerably damaged by water. One piece of the money is the course of which he was shot at. In the meantime a citizen found the money, it is to be given the wind and made and made and the soft in falling, struck the office at the side of the street and made quite a tother side of the street and made quite a tother side of the street and made quite a hole in the westher boarding. Another building to the same owner, and which had belonging to the same owner, and which had beven to the boundard of the first alley and the same owner, and wh belonging to the same owner, and which had been used as a drying house, was completely destroyed, many portions being carried to the east side of the canal. The loss is estimated

In Stringtown Michael Vanblaricum lost the front gable end of his grocery, and the wing of his dwelling was separated from the main building, and the plastering considerably in-jured. Mrs. Turberville, also, had the front gable end of a small building used as a gro-cery, blown out. The damage in these cases was inconsiderable.

The part of the east end of White River bridge containing the sign, etc., was torn off, and the White River saloon, a brick building, lost a gable end. At this place, Conductor Mendenhall, of the Citizens Street Railway, had rather a narrow escape. His car was on the switch, waiting for the arrival of another, when the wind took the place of the mule power and moved him out with his car, just in time to escape the falling brick of the
